M8:Create Leader Line and Insert Elevation defines the member of the leader line on your drawing. Features --

----- There are four functions that are automatically created for you on the M8:Create Leader Line and Insert Elevation. 1. Set the Range. 2. Add Leader Line. 3. Remove Leader Line. 4. Insert Elevation. =====

===== 6) Map Projected Heights to Undefined Heights =====

===== The FDLU-S16 is a part of FDLU-set that can convert a projected XYZ location to the flat XY coordinates. For most cases, projected heights will be converted to the flat heights, but not all the locations, there might be some discrepancies. The discrepancies can be handled by using the Projected Heights to Flat Heights tool. =====

7) Test the Leader Line's Descent =====

===== The FDLU-

S16 can be used to set the elevation of the leader line's descending part. But before the descend, you need to create the leader line. Note that there are two ways of creation of a leader line, the implicit leader line and the explicit leader line.

1. Implicit Leader Line The implicit leader line is created automatically, when you click the "Add Leader Line" button of M8:Create Leader Line and Insert Elevation. The ascending and descending parts of the leader line will be created by the subtracting and dividing of the AutoCAD elevation.
2. Explicit Leader Line The explicit leader line can be created by using the Leader Line command. The implicit leader line that is created by the M8:Create Leader Line and Insert Elevation tool is an implicit leader line. The explicit leader line is an explicit leader line. The explicit leader line can be easily edited by using the Select and Edit commands.

===== 8)

Get the Undefined Height and Gap Height of the Implicit Leader Line ===

===== The FDLU-S16 can extract the undefined and gap heights of a leader line. For a leader line that is created implicitly, there is no way to get the undefined and gap heights, you need to get the undefined and gap heights from the explicit leader line. =====

---

===== 9) Display the Leader Line's Angle and Break Points =====

===== The FDLU-S16 can display the implicit leader line's angle and break points. 1. Set the View in Advanced Layout Display tab 2. Select a leader line from the display list 3. Press the Command Line to display the leader line's angle and break points. The leader line's angle and break points can be easily edited by using the Select and Edit commands. =====
